

Rashmi Kashi is a teacher, blogger, vlogger and an author.

If Sanskrit is an ocean, its literature are the shells; Subhashitas are the pearls hidden inside!

Subhashitas have been her passion since her childhood. She has had the blessed opportunity to learn many from her mother and her inspiring High School teacher. They instilled in her a passion for Sanskrit, which, in turn, inspired her to pursue a Master's degree in Sanskrit after receiving a Bachelor's degree in Computer Science in India.

She currently lives in Princeton, NJ, USA, with her husband and their two children. She opines that these potent subhashitas have been her guiding light, so much so, that this is the one true inheritance she would like to pass on to her children!

Combining her ardor for writing and subhashitas, she began authoring commentaries in her blog, <http://www.SanskritPearls.blogspot.com> under her pen name, Kaavya Sindhu.

She later published these subhashitas and their commentaries as books. They are available in three volumes under the series titled 'Sanskrit Pearls'.

She has been a Bala Vihar teacher (at Chinmaya Vrindavan, NJ, USA) for many years and has taught most grade levels. She also teaches Sanskrit and chanting classes.
